

Pictures of the Great War—Have Your Children Paste Them in a Scrapbook

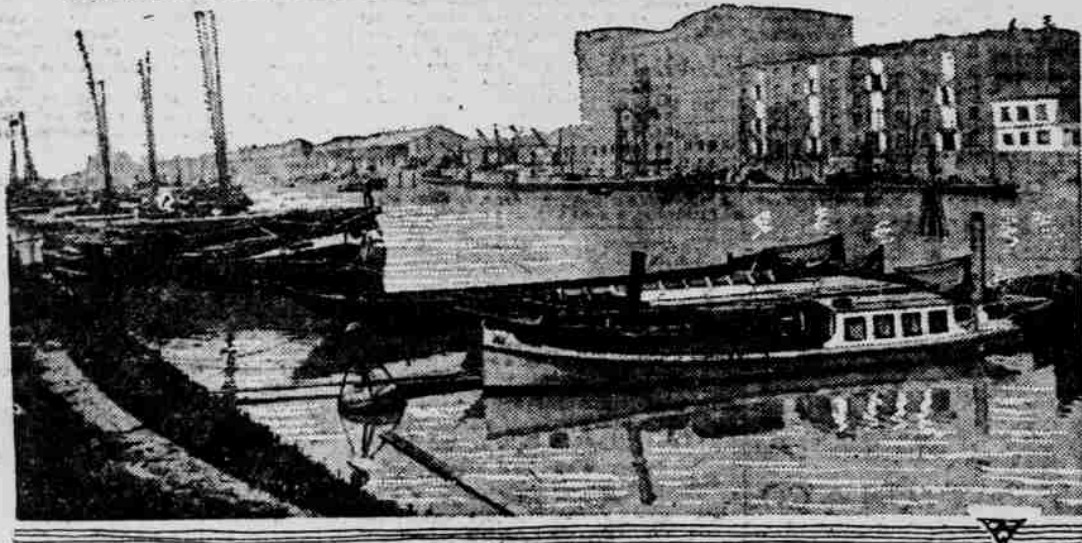

AMERICAN RED CROSS FEEDS SALONIKI REFUGEES

How the Red Cross is spending some of your money at Saloniki.

This photograph shows one of the ways in which the Red Cross uses your money for the relief of stricken Europe. The American Red Cross workers at this station are feeding the Saloniki refugees who are sheltered in the tents that dot the plain. Note the American flag on the shack in the foreground.

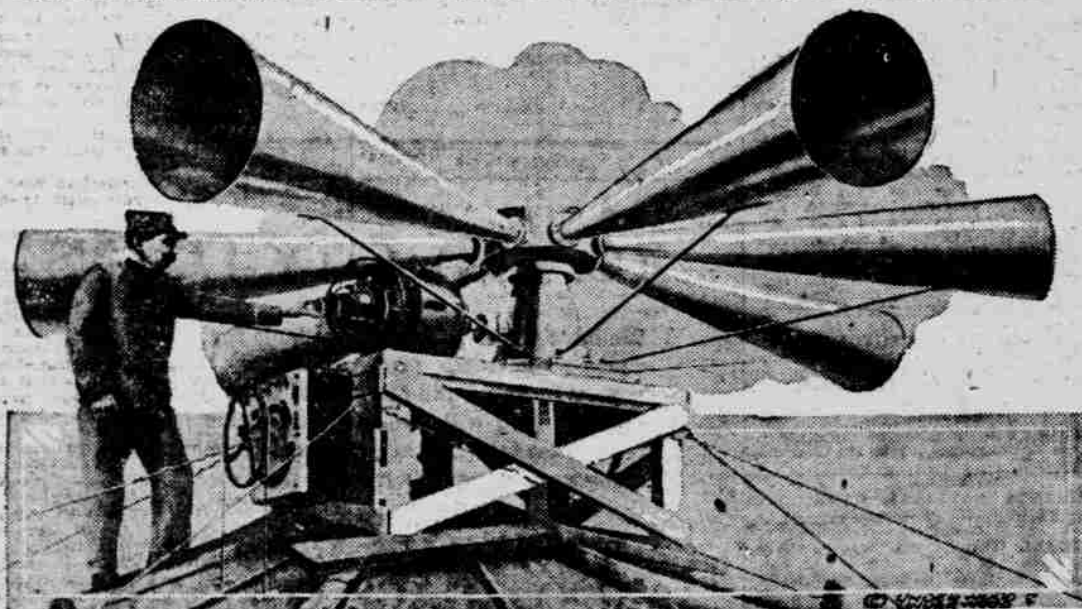

ALLIES ARE BLOWING TO BITS GERMAN TOWN OF MANNHEIM; BOTH SIDES SHOULD STOP AIR RAIDS, MANNHEIMERS SAY

The German city of Mannheim.

Mannheim, the big German industrial center, wants both sides to call off aerial raids. Not that the Mannheimers have suddenly become virtuous, but the allies are making a target of their city and slowly blowing it to bits. Mannheim applauded raids on London so long as the allies didn't retaliate. As the old saying goes, "It makes a difference whose ox is gored."

HUGE SIREN ON NOTRE DAME WARNS PARIS OF AIR RAIDS

This siren placed on the tower of Notre Dame is one of the twenty-six fixed sirens that are being installed all over Paris to warn the people of air raids or the approach of shells from the long range German gun.

Frenchmen and Americans are advancing across No Man's Land somewhere on the front in France. They are moving cautiously, ready to use the grenades they are carrying in the sacks slung over their shoulders.

EQUIPPED TO GO ON ERRAND OF MERCY: RED CROSS NURSE DEFIES HUN POISON

Red Cross nurse wearing her gas mask.

As their work will bring them within the range of the Germans' poison gas, the American Red Cross is training its field workers in the use of gas masks, at Camp Kearney, Cal. The photo is that of a nurse in training at that place, dressed as she will be when serving at advanced dressing stations.

AMERICANS USE GAS FLAPPERS TO CLEAR TRENCHES OF HUN POISON

This photo illustrates how the gas flappers, an American innovation, are used to clear trenches of gas. After an attack the men beat the floor of their trench with the flappers, causing the clouds of deadly fumes to rise and scatter to the four winds.

NAVY SECRETARY GREETES MRS. DEWEY

Mrs. Dewey and Secretary Daniels at the ceremonies.

Many army and navy governmental officials took part in the opening of the school of the National League for Women Service in Washington recently. The purpose of the institution is to fit girls in trades and professions so that they can take the places of men called to the colors. Two distinguished figures at the ceremonies were Secretary of Navy Daniels and the wife of the late Admiral Dewey. The picture shows them talking together during the ceremonies.

AMERICA TAKES INCREASING PART IN THE GREAT WAR

Arrows indicate presence of American troops.

The increasing part that America is taking in the great war is shown by this map. It was recently announced that men from the new American army have reached the line where the British are holding the Germans from Calais and the channel ports. Previous official reports had shown the presence of American troops at, at least, five other points on the long battle front.

POISON GAS BOMBS HAVE NO TERRORS FOR OUR SAMMIES

This pretty picture illustrates a poisonous gas bomb attack during a night maneuver at Camp Kearney, California. The deadly fumes have no terrors for the fighting men, however, since they are equipped with gas masks of the most approved design. Every American soldier in France is equipped with a gas mask which has been carefully tested.

WITH OUR FIGHTING SAMMIES ALONG THE FRONT LINE

A movable field kitchen; American officer wearing shield found in German trench; reading the latest newspapers from America.

Uncle Sam seen to it that his fighting nephews' food is well prepared and served, and whenever possible hot. One of the photos shows an American field kitchen preparing a meal, while en route for the front. Another shows some of our fighting men greedily devouring American newspapers at a field postoffice in France. At the left an American army officer is seen wearing body armor taken from a dugout in a German trench after a successful raid.